RIOT SPECIAL.

Chicago, Illinois, July 30.—The scene of Riot has shifted from Washington, the nation's capital, to Chicago, America's greatest cosmopolitan city, and regarded every where as the world's greatest center of race progress. Sunday afternoon, a Colored lad was bathing in Lake Michigan near the Beach at East 29th street. The day was hot and tens of thousands of Chicago's population were seeking relief from the heat in the cooling waters of Lake Michigan. This lad was on a raft and a white ruffian threw a stone and knocked him into the water where he drowned before being rescued. The attention of white policemen was immediately called to the ruffian, but the policeman refused to arrest the man, where upon the crowd became angered and in a short time began to "clean up" the place. The man accused of the crime is Augustus Strauber. Finally, he was arrested by two Colored detectives, Middleton and Scott. The news of the crime scattered like wild fire. Hundreds rushed from the beach in their bathing costumes, hurrying to places of shelter while others hurried to their nearby homes for revolvers and rifles. And, in less than an hour, there was a general battle in which more than thirty people have been killed and five hundred wounded and the end is not yet.
